

Integrity and personal data protection - Other Buns International

This document describes how we work with personal data protection and integrity and also outlines your rights in this area. "You" refer to yourself or someone acting on your behalf (such as family members or peers from your organization). "We" refers to Other Buns International who arranges obstacle course races under the Toughest and Toughest Family brand.

How we collect and use personal data

Witch data and the usage of it varies with what kind of services/products/events you use/register for and wich parts of our website you use.

1. Usage of our website

See our website policy for updates on how we collect and use data when you use our website and online services.

2. Registration for one of our events

The personal data we collect/request/store are those needed to secure the service you have signed up for. That means delivering a safe and well-organized race or event. To be able to do so we need to collect and store the data requested such as name, home address, phone number, e-mail address, birth data and gender. In applicable cases also data for payment (wich is handles by our partners under strict integrity regulations – see section about third party data sharing). All our data handling in these sections is about giving you the best possible event experience as well as living up to safety regulations and highest possible event standards. For example the information is used to get you relevant information pre-, during and after the race, place you in the accurate starting group and deliver your results after the race. All data is handled with respect to current regulations such as GDPR and as described in this document.

3. Information and marketing through e-mail

We use your e-mail to inform about our events and relevant marketing in relation to this. You can choose not to get content about other events/services than you have registered for by unsubscribing to the emails. We do however always need to be able to inform you about the race you are registered for to keep you updated on news, changes and important information regarding your participation.

Information & data sharing

We never sell your data to third parties. We do however need to share it with a few partners that are involved in delivering the service/event you have registered for. Examples of this is our timing partner, payment partners and in some cases medical/safety partners.

Note that these partnerships can vary over time but we always have strict regulations and demands that all our partners obliges to the same data protection policies and that they are all GDPR updated.

Data storage

We save and store your personal data for the usage as described in this document (providing the services you have registered for).

When we don't need your information any more or if you choose to have them deleted before that time occurs we erase them from all our systems.

Your rights

You have certain rights regarding your personal data that you should be aware of. You have the right to get an overview of wich personal data we have stored about you, to get that data altered or deleted from our system permanently. You have the right to unsubscribe from any marketing and information or usage of your data in profiling and marketing.

If you have complaints we hope you get in touch with us (info@toughest.se) but you can also report to the overseeing authority, Datainspektionen (https://www.datainspektionen.se/.)

Contact us

Our integrity manager is always available for your questions or suggestions. It is his/hers assignment to make sure that your data is protected and handled with your integrity as the highest priority. Our integrity and data manager is reached by mailing us at: info@toughest.se

Your integrity is important for us so don't hesitate to contact us!